Kristin Law, Nigel Law : By Canoe before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised By Canoe:

I found the book fascinating from the start, from the audacity of the authors to sell every item that couldn't be packed in a canoe, to a view of Americana that most of us forgo in our temperature-controlled world and an honest look at real people. It made me think about what I "can't do without", and how that's not really true. I bought an extra copy for my Dad, who admires those who listen to their own drummer.2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. Andy Warhol - Not!By A CustomerThis is a great book. It's something you can pick up and read cover to cover, or a chapter at a time. What I particularly like about it is how refreshing and clean the book is. It's a book about a journey that gives the authors a cross-section of America, both literally and figuratively. They tell you what they like, what they don't like, what they expected, and what they did not.Sometimes books of this nature get a bit preachy (i.e. you should live life the way I do), but this book doesn't go there. It is frank about beliefs, opinions, pleasures and disappointments, and draws you in to the journey. I found myself chuckling at various stories, and sharing those with my wife. At other times I shared the disappointment the authors experienced. At all times I felt like my toes were dangling in the water with them. The photos are terrific. These are the types of shots that give the adage "A photo is worth a thousand words," real meaning. I'm not sure if I laughed more at the photo: "Andy Warhol Bruised My Banana" or the title of the photo itself. I kept thinking, "These two have WAY too much time on their hands'... but then again, that's where the real beauty of this book lies. Buy it. Share it. Wait a minute, don't share it - make 'em buy their own - I want to see these two make some money so they can take another trip (and write another book?). 1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Bloody [Mary] these kids are crazy! By A Customer All right lets just start by saying these kids are crazy. Paddling down the M-I-S-S-I-S-S-I-P-P-I from Wisconsin to the Gulf of Mexico and then oh if that wasn't punishment enough paddling around the Gulf of Mexico to the Florida Keys. Wowza! Adventureorama! Tom Sawyer and Huckfin would be green with envy as was I reading this beautifully laid out book. It's an honest and compelling combination of journal, photo essay and sketch diary. Lots of humor and insight. Nigel and Kristen might be the last great American explorers. A Lewis and Clark for the New Millenium.

"By Canoe" is the personal account of a husband and wife team who travelled six months and 3,000 miles in a canoe from Wisconsin to the Florida Keys! With many gritty black and white photographs, journal entries, and humorous anecdotes, this 150-page travel essay is both entertaining and informative.

About the Author We always said, "It ain't where you're from, it's where you're at!"
