Roy Dutton : The History of New Brighton Tower before purchasing it in order to gauge whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The History of New Brighton Tower:

One of the most important structures ever built in Victorian Britain, the tallest building in the land, it stood at 567 feet.

The Tower had been constructed in record time. It towered over the greatest port in the land, a beacon to the shipping that sailed in and out of the River Mersey. The Tower Theatre, sited between the legs of the tower, could accommodate an audience of 2,500, while the ballroom the largest in the North could entertain another 1000 couples dancing the night away. Taking a walk down memory lane, and chronicling many of the famous faces that have trodden the boards including the Beatles that appeared 27 times. Welcome to the history of New Brighton Tower.

About the Author Roy Dutton is a local historian with a passionate interest in all things to do with New Brighton.
