Own Experience:

Book by Hitchcock, Laura

This book explains a step-by-step method for creating your own overseas internship experience where no established program exists. There are many travel books that can help you plan an itinerary or books that list established internships, but this publication sets out to help the reader create their own experience in the country of their choice. --

Book Description From the Publisher Do You Have A New College Graduate With The "No Job" Blues? Every year over 4.5 million students graduate from U.S. colleges and universities and 70% will have no job prospects. Most college graduates aren't sure of their path in life but many bright, motivated graduates are determined to do something extraordinary about the situation. Instead of wondering "what am I going to do now?" they can actively shape their future and have the time of their lives. They find foreign internships suited to their career path. It isn't easy to find a foreign internship but the benefits vastly outweigh the drawbacks. These interns travel with a purpose. They improve job qualifications, experience an inside view of a different culture, sharpen foreign language skills, gain confidence, self-reliance, and make life long friendships. There is a new resource available to these eager young adults. The Imaginative Soul's Guide to Foreign Internships, A Roadmap to Envision, Create and Arrange Your Own Experience by Laura Hitchcock, outlines a step-by-step method for anyone to create a project tailored to their future career path in the country of their choice. Ms. Hitchcock found foreign internships in the areas of public relations, the arts and print journalism. She says, "There are many guides available to help you plan a trip and there are guides listing established internship programs. This is different, it shows anyone how to create the perfect internship anywhere, especially if no established internship program exists. You don't need a big bank account. You don't need to know the chairman of a fortune 500 company. All you DO need is determination and persistence.
