Mary Allan-Olney : The New Virginians, Vol. 2 of 2 (Classic Reprint) before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised The New Virginians, Vol. 2 of 2 (Classic Reprint):

Excerpt from The New Virginians, Vol. 2 of 2 Just as I open my desk, E. Calls to me to bring the sweet-potatoes. He has got the hot bed ready for them. They want 'a hotbed all to themselves, and can bear a heat which would kill anything else, being tropical in habit and habitat. I rush out with the box of tubers which we had carefully looked over the day before. I give a final examination, and hand the tubers as he places them. Then I get tallies to mark the kinds, - red, white, and yellow. The yellow are by far the best they taste like chest nuts, only not so ousy. The white grow as big as a child's head, but are poor in quality.
