William W. Gorman Jr. This book offers some interesting shots you'll want in your own library of photos. However, the photos are mostly from easy-to-get-to places and are standard shots you may not need this book to identify. For Utah I have found two of David Day's books much more helpful in obtaining interesting shots: "Utah's Incredible Backcountry Trails" and "Canyonlands National Park Favorite Jeep Roads and Hiking Trails." He tells you how to get there and provides examples of good shots of interest. 5 of 5 people found the following review helpful.

Disappointment: Just a sub-par tourbook
By J. Huang
The book "Photographer's guide to Yellowstone and Grand Teton National Parks" helped me so much before my trip that I thought this book would be on the same level by its name. Only to be very much disappointed. The author piles up some local history which one could find from any decent tour book and lists some general area for photo-taking. But there are very little details helpful to photographers. I guess the author expects the readers to spend months, if not years, to venture out and discover their own photogenic spots. The problem is one would not need this book at all in that case. For rest of the photographers needing a "guide" to an unfamiliar area, this book is of little help. In fact, outright useless. 0 of 0 people found the following review helpful.
Best book ever for planning trips.
By lucylu
I love taking pictures, and this book is the best way to plan a trip. I don't want museums, events etc. I want to go where the best places to photograph are and this is an awesome book for doing that. Highlight what you want to see and plan the trip. Have done Maine, Utah and Grand Canyon. Working on Oregon now. Love these books!!

The Canyon Country of the Southwestern U.S. hosts some of the most unusual and beautiful landscapes and geography in the world. These awesome displays of the sculpture-making capabilities of nature are stunning in their shapes, varieties of color, and the ways in which they capture the sunlight. Now, John Annerino, critically acclaimed photographer and author gives you the tools to find and shoot these locations. The parks that are covered around this famous Four Corners region of Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado and Utah include: Mesa Verde, Glen Canyon, Grand Staircase-Escalante, Zion, Capitol Reef, Bryce, Canyonlands, Arches, and Black Canyon of the Gunnison. Annerino will guide you on how to find the precise locations to shoot those postcard-perfect shots and provides tips on timing, lighting, composition, and the story behind the scenery. No visitor to this area should be without it. Full-color throughout.

"The photographs are National Geographic quality in both technique and printing -- beautiful enough to either inspire or intimidate the reader."-- San Francisco Chronicle
"John Annerino has made it his mission to explore and capture this world of light, stone, and magic. He succeeds on many levels, with great passion and awesome results."-- National Geographic Adventure, on Canyon Country: A Photographic Journey
