This large format coffee table book of dramatically original color photographs by Kansas City photographer Kevin Sink, captures the beautiful art and architecture of the Plaza, Kansas City's most cherished landmark. Each of the four chapters takes you on a journey around the Plaza from springtime through the holiday lights. The photographs in the book are characterized by strong aesthetic appeal, just like the Plaza itself. The book takes the viewer through the Plaza and reveals the beautiful art and architecture that we sometimes pass by because of our hurried lifestyles. Many of the photographs capture spectacular and very transient light and the book has an especially satisfying collection of holiday lights images. An beautiful and elegant design by Lynette Ubel highlights the photographs. A must have for those who have visited the Plaza for a day or have lived here for a lifetime.

About the AuthorKevin Sink is a professional photographer specializing in photography of the natural landscape. As an expression of his passion for the outdoors, he has been photographing nature since age 10, as an extension of his hobby of bird watching. In 1989, at the age of 29, Kevin launched his career as a professional landscape photographer. Years of photographic field work around the country and a graduate degree in biology have given nature a profound relevance in Kevin's life, something he shares through his photographs. This passion for the natural world and an open mind to listen for what nature has to say to us, has resulted in an ability to translate the delicate moods and artistry of nature to the final print. Kevin makes his home with wife Ann and their children, Stefan and Annika, in Roeland Park, Kansas. Kevin's other interests are cycling, reading, and camping with his family
